ALBERTA GALLATIN IN "A CLEAN SLATE."

"A CLEAN SLATE."

Alberta Gallatin says that "A Clean Slate," which she plays at the opera house here next Friday and Saturday night, might be described as a comedy of sentiment, embracing an intensely human and serious dramatic love interest.

The quaint old English Devonshire background furnishes an attractive locale for R. C. Carton's keen sense of humor, and the wonderful success and vogue which the play has attained on Broadway and in London, has been attributed to the absolute originality of the plot and treatment, and the types of character which are new creations to the stage.

Miss Gallatin, her company, and the Madison Square Theatre production, will appear intact as presented at the Criterion Theatre, London, during its twelve months run.

The play deserves all the flattering notices that have preceded its presentation here and great interest has been manifested over the coming of this season's smartest bit. The title of "A Clean Slate" is said to carry no thought of the rare delicacy and real charm for which this captivating comedy excels.

Miss Gallatin is making the hit of her career as the saucy, worldly heroine, "Mrs. Tracy Auberton," and in her swell Felix frocks, is said to be a thing of beauty, if not a joy forever!
